SAFE NET, INC

In 1983, in a Timonium, Maryland basement, two NSA engineers founded Industrial Resource Engineering (IRE). IRE made a name for itself, selling enterprise network security solutions, using encryption technology to protect the public and private networks of financial institutions before expanding into the federal government sector. Then, in 2000, IRE was officially renamed SafeNet. after its award-winning VPN product line. From there, SafeNet embarked on a series of strategic company acquisitions— Securelink, Cylink Corporation, Raqia Networks, Inc., SSH, and then merger with Rainbow Technologies in 2004, becoming the world's seventh largest information security company and tripling its revenue base. During the next few years, SafeNet acquired DMDsecure, Datakey, Mediasentry and Eramcom Technologies. Today, SafeNet offers the broadest range of products and solutions of any security company in the world, protecting critical business data, communications and digital identities through a full spectrum of encryption technologies, hardware, software, and chips.
